XXXVIII Congress—First Session.

WASHINGTON, February 9. HOUSE.

Mr. Davis called up the Louisiana Congressional Election case.

Mr. Fielder indicated his right to a seat. He said a few words, but if he had those words he would have spoken them on the floor of his country.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.

The subject of confiscated lands has been under consideration of the Committee on Confiscation, and of the Committee with the policy of the Government, and who have given the subject careful attention, have been obtained; and it is probable a bill providing for the disposal of such lands in legal form, giving clear titles will soon be introduced.

The President approves and will sign the joint resolution upon confiscation, which passed the House, and will no doubt pass the Senate.

A caucus of Republican members of both branches of Congress was held to-night at the Capitol, Gen. Clark presiding. It was adopted as the sense of the meeting that instructions should be given to the National Republicans, Committee to fill vacancies from States not now represented, and also such other vacancies as might exist in consequence of former members being absent, abroad or on duty in the service.

Governor Solomon, of Wisconsin, and Curtin, of Pennsylvania, have arrived here. A number of Governors are also expected. It is understood that they are here for the purpose of consulting with the authorities upon the question of the extension of the franchise under the new order for 500,000 men.

Accounts from the South state that the rebel armies encroach to-day more men than at any moment since the commencement of the war. The conception has been rung less frequently. Unless our arms are strongly re-enforced before spring, the military authorities here believe that much of the advantage we have gained in the last twelve months will be lost, and that the evacuation of territory which we will not have sufficient troops to garrison.

An officer, just from Grant's headquarters, says that the Army of the Potomac, to the north of the Union lines, in Union soil, his uniform can ride unmolested to any part of Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama.

The New York papers contain the following further particulars of the late reconnaissance over the lines. But we have no reliable information: The Fourteenth Connecticut suffered heavily. The Tribune's dispatch says Gen. Kilpatrick's reconnaissance conclusively proves that no force of the enemy occupies the country west of the Mississippi. The parties of cavalry all belong to the Hampton Legion, which is stationed at Fredericksburg. More than half the videttes have no horses, are seldom relieved, and are sometimes obliged to walk two or three miles to their post of duty.

The Times' dispatch says that it has been ascertained that the main body of Lee's army is between Gordonsville and Orange Court-

Citizens residing within the enemy's lines say that Lee expects to have 45,000 conscripts added to his army by the new levy, raising it to 90,000 men.

A Northern letter of the 4th, to the Tribune, says a deserter from the Sixth North Carolina, Gen. Clingman's brigade, reports that Gen. Wistert was slightly wounded by a shell on the 28th. The report is not reliable, but in our front, and 15,000 men. He thinks they have gone to Little Washington, and says they supposed we had only a couple of regiments here.

He says some 300 men and officers, with boats, came from the garrison at Richmond, and launched their boats in the Neuse river. These are the ones, of course, that took the Underwriter.

It is known that the work about here is over for a few days, and we are looking to Washington, N. C.

FT. MONROE, Feb. 8.

The expedition having returned, we are permitted to state the following facts: On Saturday morning, Gen. Butler's forces, under command of Brigadier General Wistert, moved from Yorktown, Virginia, to New Kent County, Va. The movement was made in our front, and 15,000 men. He thinks they have gone to Little Washington, and says they supposed we had only a couple of regiments here.

He says some 300 men and officers, with boats, came from the garrison at Richmond, and launched their boats in the Neuse river. These are the ones, of course, that took the Underwriter.
